BHS Basketball Boys Win Tournament Championship in Aledo

The Brewer boy's basketball team had an outstanding showing at the Moritz Classic this past weekend in Aledo, taking down some heavy hitters along the way.

Coach Jason Porostovsky said his team did about as well as could be expected.

"We won the tournament championship, winning all three games by double figures," Porostovsky said. "We beat Everman, Keller Central and then Aledo in the championship game."

Julian Perez and Tyren Mitchell were both named to the all-tournament team for the Bears.

Brewer will wrap up its non-district schedule in the next week, and Porostovsky said he believes his team is ready for dis- (continued on page 3)

From National Crime Prevention Council

Seniors Can Stop Scoundrels and Scams

Financial fraud can be difficult to recognize. This type of fraud can include identity theft, fake check and wire transfer scams, investment and credit card fraud, and bogus online charitable solicitations. Unfortunately, only one in five of these crimes are reported.

The National Crime Prevention Council offers the following tips:

- It's shrewd, not rude to hang up on a suspicious telemarketer.
- Don't give personal information to people you don't know unless you initiated the contact.
- Don't let yourself get pressured into a verbal agreement or signing a contract.
- Be skeptical of online charitable solicitations and other online offers. If interested, ask to receive the information in the mail and check to be sure the company is legitimate.
- Never agree to pay for products or services in advance.
- Get estimates and ask for references on home repair offers and other products or services.

If you suspect fraud, contact your local law enforcement agency immediately.

To learn more about protecting yourself from financial fraud, visit the National Crime Prevention website at: www.ncpc.org.

trict competition.

“Our non-district schedule has provided us with a wide range of styles with tough competition,” Porostovsky said. “I feel we are prepared to face any style now.”

The Bears will compete in the Kaufman tournament this weekend, and Porostovsky said it will be another good opportunity.

“We will travel to Kaufman again to play a variety of teams that we don’t normally see in our area,” Porostovsky said. “We are hoping to continue to be challenged so we can fix our issues.”

On the girl's side, Brewer beat Tenaha by a score of 77-60 on Friday and coach Teranie Lewis said it was a good, efficient win for the Lady Bears.

“We performed well against Tenaha,” Lewis said. “It was a nice, fast-paced game and another opportunity for growth. It was a great game to head into district.”

Lewis said she had a couple of standout efforts in the game.

“Jayla Jackson-Allen made some great shots and played really well on defense,” Lewis said. “Chania Price and Eryn McKinzie also played well.”

Brewer opened up district play on Tuesday with Granbury and will host Wichita Falls Rider at 6:15 p.m. tomorrow night.

Lewis said she believes her team is in good shape as the district schedule gets underway.

“I think the non-district schedule has prepared us well for district play,” Lewis said. “That’s always the goal— to schedule opponents that will get us ready.”

Texas History Minute by Dr. Ken Bridges

NASA Engineer and Flight Director, Christopher Kraft

In the 1960s, the United States entered a new era of exploration as NASA began sending astronauts into space. It took the combined efforts of thousands of people to make each mission successful. The direction from the ground was critical given the complexity of spaceflight and how the slightest mistake could be fatal. Chris Kraft served as NASA flight director for these early missions, becoming a revered figure in Houston and across the nation.

He was born Christopher Columbus Kraft, the namesake of his father, in what is now Hampton, Virginia, in 1924. He grew up in the coastal community and in the shadow of the Langley Aeronautical Laboratory, established by the federal government just a few years before he was born as a center to design and test aircraft.

When he graduated high school in 1942, several months after the United States entered World War II, he attempted to enlist in the navy just as many other men his age were doing. Kraft hoped to become a pilot, but a burn injury from his childhood caused him to be rejected for the service altogether. Instead, he enrolled at Virginia Tech and graduated with a degree in aeronautical engineering in two years.

Kraft initially hoped to move away from Hampton, but in 1944, he won a position with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics which promptly assigned him to the Langley Research Center. President Dwight D. Eisenhower transformed NACA into the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in 1958. Kraft was then chosen as one of 35 engineers to design what became the Mercury program, the first American manned space mission.

The group tasked Kraft with designing the flight program – organizing the launch, flight, and landing of the space capsules. In the process, he became the first flight director. He oversaw a team of engineers and realized that the complexity of the equipment would require rigorous testing and then constant monitoring during flight as well as a team of experts to correct any problems.

The seven Mercury missions between 1961 and 1963 put a small one-man capsule into low orbit. Kraft made sure nothing was left to chance. He quickly developed a reputation for precision and perfection. He personally oversaw each detail of each mission. But as demanding as he was, he also fostered an environment of trust. In the end, the craft and the missions were so complicated that the astronaut, flight director, and the army of engineers behind it all had to trust one another. Because he insisted on having the last word with any aspect of the mission, he often clashed with senior NASA administrators and astronauts.

In spite of the preparation and expertise, each mission had special problems that could have turned these flights into deadly tragedies. The coordination that Kraft developed inspired the creative thinking and expert analyses needed to avoid disaster.

The Gemini and Apollo missions required a more advanced flight control center, leading to the creation of what is now the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston in 1963. Kraft joined the move and became a permanent resident. With the continuing success of the space program, Kraft became almost as famous as the astronauts themselves. In 1966, his home town of Hampton, Virginia, named its new elementary school in his honor.

NASA moved him into more senior positions with the Apollo lunar missions. Ultimately, NASA promoted him to director of the Manned Spacecraft Center in 1972.

In the 1970s, Kraft helped develop the conceptual design for the space shuttle. With NASA reaching new heights in manned exploration, the shuttle seemed the next logical step. Kraft and others at NASA fully believed that lunar exploration would become increasingly common and that the shuttle would bring astronauts to a future orbiting space station. Then other craft would take them to the Moon, Mars, and beyond. NASA projected it would send men to Mars by 1985 before a wave of budget cuts ended lunar landings after 1972.

In spite of the cutbacks, Kraft kept NASA's focus on the mission of exploration. He oversaw the first four shuttle launches in 1981 and 1982, inspiring many Americans with the nation's return to manned flight. The success of the shuttle missions showed the importance of astronomical discoveries and the importance of studying the effects of zero gravity environments. By 1982, he decided it was time to retire from NASA.

Still only 58 years old, Kraft worked for several years as a consultant. He also worked for the Houston Chamber of Commerce.

Kraft spent several years travelling and speaking about space exploration. He wrote his autobiography, Flight: My Life in Mission Control in 2001 reflecting on the development of the space program and his thoughts about its future.

In 2011, NASA renamed the flight control room at the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center after him.

Though he had never been a pilot or astronaut himself, the Aviation Hall of Fame inducted him in 2016.

He died in Houston in July 2019 at age 95.

NFPA Urges Added Caution this Holiday Season: Christmas Day and Christmas Eve Among Leading Days for U.S. Home Fires

Many hallmarks of the holiday season, including Christmas trees, holiday decorations, and festive meals present potential fire hazards that contribute to an annual increase in U.S. home fires at this time of year. According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), Christmas Day and Christmas Eve are among the leading days of the year for home fires.

“December is a leading month for home fires, in large part because many of the activities we engage in during the holiday season reflect leading causes of home fires year-round,” said Lorraine Carli, NFPA vice president of Outreach and Advocacy. “Plus, as colder temperatures impact much of the country, use of heating equipment increases significantly.”

Fortunately, Carli notes, the majority of winter fires can be prevented with a little added awareness and planning.

“By knowing where potential fire hazards exist and taking some basic safety precautions to prevent them, people can enjoy a festive, fire-free holiday season,” said Carli.

The NFPA Winter Holidays page offers a wide variety of tips and resources to reduce the risk of fires, while the latest NFPA statistics underscore the increased risk of fire during the holiday season and beyond:

Christmas Trees

- An estimated average of 160 home fires involving Christmas trees caused two civilian deaths, 11 civilian injuries, and $12 million in direct property damage per year between 2016 and 2020.

- Some type of electrical distribution or lighting equipment, including decorative lights, was involved in more than two of five (44 percent) of home Christmas tree fires. Nearly one in five Christmas tree fires (19 percent) were started by decorative lights.

- The majority (74 percent) of Christmas tree fires occur in December and January.

Decorations

- An estimated average of 790 home fires that began when decorations (other than Christmas trees) caught fire caused an average of one civilian death, 26 civilian injuries and $13 million in direct property damage per year between 2015 and 2019.

- One in five home decoration fires occurred in December.
- Year-round, 35 percent of home decoration fires began with candles; in December, the number jumped to 45 percent.

- In more than two of every five fires (44 percent) involving decorations, the decoration was too close to a heat source such as a candle, cooking or heating equipment.

Candles

- An estimated average of 7,400 home fires (2 percent) started by candles caused an average of 90 civilian deaths (three percent), 670 civilian injuries (6 percent), and $291 million (4 percent) in direct property damage per year between 2015 and 2019.

- Candle fires peak in December and January with 11 percent of candle fires in each of these months.

- In three of every five candle fires, the candle was too close to something that could catch fire.

- Christmas is the peak day for candle fires with roughly 2.5 times the daily average; Christmas Eve ranked second.

- Falling asleep was a factor in 10 percent of the home candle fires and 12 percent of the associated deaths.

Cooking

- Cooking is the leading cause of reported home fires (49 percent) and home fire injuries and the second-leading cause of home fire deaths.

- Unattended cooking is the leading cause of home cooking fires.

- Thanksgiving is the peak day for home cooking fires, followed by Christmas Day and Christmas Eve.

Fires caused by heating equipment, the second-leading cause of U.S. home fires year-round, peak during the winter months, when temperatures drop and more people use heating equipment to keep their homes warm. Put a Freeze on Winter Fires, an annual NFPA campaign with the U.S. Fire Administration (USFA), works to educate the public about ways to stay safe during the colder months, offering tip sheets and other resources to help reduce the risk of heating fires and other winter hazards.

About the National Fire Protection Association® (NFPA®)

Flu and the Holiday Season: What You Need to Know

December through March is typically peak influenza (flu) season, though this season is off to an earlier start, with high activity currently across the country. While common, flu is a potentially serious and highly contagious respiratory illness.

In time for holiday travel and festivities, a new American Lung Association campaign aims to educate Americans about the flu and steps they can take to protect themselves and others from severe flu illness. Here's what to know:

- Who is impacted by flu?

Flu can affect anyone, however, certain communities are at higher risk of severe illness and complications, such as those living with chronic medical conditions including chronic lung disease, heart disease and diabetes.

During past flu seasons, approximately 90 percent of flu-related hospitalizations were among adults with at least one underlying medical condition.

During the 2022-23 flu season, approximately 30 percent of hospitalizations were among adults with chronic lung disease. People from certain racial and ethnic minority groups are also at higher risk for being hospitalized with flu compared to non-Hispanic white adults.

- What will this year's flu season look like?

Flu activity was relatively low the last two flu seasons, but it causes a significant burden every winter.

Seasonal influenza activity is already elevated and continues to increase across the country. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that as of early December, there have been at least 8.7 million illnesses and 78,000 hospitalizations.

- How can I protect myself?

While covering your cough, washing your hands frequently and staying home when you're sick can help stop the spread of flu, the very best way to protect yourself, your loved ones, and your community is with vaccination.

The flu shot is recommended on an annual basis for everyone six months of age and older and can be given at the same time as COVID-19 vaccination.

Flu vaccination is especially important for people with chronic lung disease and other chronic health conditions.

Speak with your healthcare provider to learn more about influenza and annual vaccination.

- When should I see a doctor?

If you do get sick, call your doctor as soon as possible for diagnosis and treatment, especially if you're at high risk for complications.

You should also consult your doctor if you have complications such as difficulty breathing, chest pains or a cough persisting for weeks or months after other symptoms go away.

To learn more, visit Lung.org/prevent-flu.

Before you gather with loved ones for the holidays, take steps to protect them from flu.

Practice good health habits and get your annual vaccination as early as possible.

Cease the Grease this Holiday Season

The 2023 Holiday Grease Roundup is in full swing. Now through Jan. 12, we invite you to drop off your used cooking grease at the convenient 8212 Albert Street drop off location.

As a reminder, hot grease is easy to pour down the drain, but it can cause some serious issues once it cools down. Unfortunately, it can solidify and create stubborn clogs that are a pain to get rid of. We know it's easy to overlook this problem, but trust us, it's better to take care of it before it causes blockages and other plumbing headaches.

Let's keep the holiday spirits high and take a few moments to dispose of your used cooking grease properly. Your pipes will thank you later!
