Brewer Soccer, Baseball and Power Lifting Wrap Up

The Brewer boys soccer team clinched a playoff berth last week with a 2-1 victory over Azle.

Aysak Aguilar and Kenneth Rodriguez both scored in the victory over the hornets, and as Brewer prepares for post-season play, coach Marcos Zamarron said, while he is pleased with the level at which his team is playing, he is ever mindful of opportunities for improvement.

"I am very proud of our boys," Zamarron said. "The team has been playing well, but there is still a lot we need to work on. Especially as games go on, we seek out different weaknesses we have and need to address which help us continue to grow."

On the girls side, the Lady Bears also defeated Azle last week, winning by a score of 3-2.

Jade Reyes scored two goals in the game for Brewer, and Kylah Blakely scored as well.

Claire Simons, Diana Torres and Ashton Maitlen all picked up assists in the game for the Lady Bears.

On the diamond, the Brewer baseball team went 1-4 overall in the Spring Break Bash Tournament this past weekend, and coach Gilbert Ramirez said it was a good experience for his team.

"I thought we played great defensively," Ramirez said. "We only had one error in five games this week. I am proud of the progress that we are making, but we have to be better with our situational hitting."

Ramirez said he had a number of strong performances in the tournament.

Evan Laredo lead the Bears offensively, going 8-16 with three RBI.

Supporting U.S. Troops in Eastern Europe

As U.S. troops support NATO allies in Eastern Europe amid the crisis in Ukraine, efforts are being made to boost morale and connect service members to friends and family back home.

Sudden deployments like these are incredibly challenging for military families. One moment, a family is making plans for the weekend and deciding who will pick up groceries on the way home – and the next, a service member is packing their bags in a rush, canceling that vacation they had planned and saying goodbye to their spouse, children and friends. Suddenly, life goes from everyday normalcy to life on the frontlines.

“This is something they train for. Soldiers do layout after layout preparing to grab their bags and go at a moment’s notice,” said the spouse of a soldier at Fort Bragg.

However, no matter how much a spouse mentally prepares, nothing can explain the way it feels to watch them walk out the door. According to the Blue Star Families 2020 Military Lifestyle Survey, deployment and time spent away from family were two of the top five issues facing active duty, Reserve and National Guard families today.

To support troops and military families, USO staff and volunteers in the United States and Europe are working around the clock to deliver helpful resources. These efforts include:

- Providing Wi-Fi and call centers to keep service members connected to family back home. This is particularly important for the thousands of troops in Eastern Europe who otherwise have no access to cell phones and laptops.
- Distributing care packages, to ensure service members feel valued and supported. Packages include hygiene kits with essential toiletries, and snack packs with foods that remind them of home.
- Sending USO2GO and portable boxed programs to military units on the move, which include snacks, toiletries, games and sports equipment to keep troops entertained while giving them much-needed opportunities for relaxation.
- Providing hot meals to deployed service members, as well as their families at home.

- Offering a place to relax at USO locations throughout Europe, including a newly opened center in Poland and unstaffed centers in Eastern Europe.
- Delivering thousands of blankets, beanies and hand warmers to those operating in extremely cold environments.
- Supporting military families on the home front with community-building activities, opportunities to communicate with deployed loved ones, and other essential resources.

Although deployment can be stressful, efforts like these can help alleviate the tension. According to USO research, 94 percent of surveyed service members reported that USO Programs ease their stress during deployment, and 96 percent feel more connected to loved ones during absence through the use of USO programs.

To learn more and discover ways to give back to military members and families, visit uso.org/uso-stands-ready-to-support.

“Although deployments are part of the journey for our service members and their families, the separation and uncertainty are among the most difficult aspects of life in the military,” said USO chief operating officer, Alan Reyes. “That’s why the USO always stands beside both service members and their families to strengthen and support them, especially during these short-fuse deployments.”

Emergency Outdoor Warning Siren System

The city of White Settlement and the city of Fort Worth have emergency warning siren systems that service the communities. These sirens will be activated not only for tornados, but when emergency situations arise that have the potential to affect White Settlement and nearby areas. Sirens will be activated for the following: a tornado warning issued by the National Weather Service, tornado or funnel cloud reported by a reliable source, sustained winds in excess of 60 miles per hour, reports of hail larger than one inch, chemical spill emergency, state or national emergency declared by the governor or president, and other emergencies as appropriate.

The city of White Settlement and city of Fort Worth both test the sirens on the first Wednesday of each month at 1 p.m. The test will run for about 90 seconds. The test will not be conducted on holidays or during periods of inclement weather.

If you hear the sirens during times other than the test times, seek shelter indoors and check one of the local radio or television stations for further information on the emergency.

First President of the University of Texas, George Winston

by Dr. Ken Bridges

The University of Texas has been in operation for nearly 140 years. Since that time, tens of thousands of UT graduates have enjoyed careers in all fields that have shaped both the state and the world alike. In its early years, it struggled as it had difficulty finding students, funding, or respect. It took the efforts of its first president, George T. Winston, to change the direction of UT.

George Tayloe Winston was born in North Carolina in 1852. Exceptionally bright, he entered the University of North Carolina at age 13 in 1866. The college, however, was struggling after the end of the Civil War and shut down. Instead, Winston accepted an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy, attending from 1868 to 1870. Though he excelled academically, severe seasickness ended his naval career, and he left the academy. He earned a degree in literature from Cornell University in New York in 1874 and then returned to North Carolina.

The University of North Carolina had reopened by 1875, and Winston took a position as professor of Latin and German. Respected by his fellow professors, he was named secretary of the faculty.

In 1891, Winston was promoted to president of the university. He understood the potential that a university could have for an impoverished state looking to rebuild its economy. He went across the state to convince residents of the university's importance, which helped improve its reputation and enrollment. Within a few years, its income would double and enrollment would triple. By 1895, Winston had been elected president of the Association of Southern Colleges and Secondary Schools in recognition of his work.

Texas was facing similar struggles at the time. In the early days of the University of Texas, there was not a president in charge of the college. The administrative system was very loose, with professors often taking multiple administrative roles. The university was governed by a board of professors who jointly set policy and oversaw the day-to-day operations, and one professor would head this committee. This committee then reported to the Board of Trustees, which was appointed by the governor. This was very common among many colleges and universities at the time. But with the university growing in number of students enrolled and in importance to Texas, the professors decided that a president was needed to manage the college and to be the face of the university to the world.

George Waggener, a professor of history and English who had worked at the university since it opened in 1883, was chosen to be the interim president in 1895 while a permanent president was found. By 1896, the search had lasted a year, and trustees were no closer to finding a candidate.

In June 1896, Winston was invited to give the graduation address at the university. By this time, he had earned a great deal of respect among academics in regard to higher education. He gave a rousing address on the future of universities. The trustees were especially impressed. They had found their president. The trustees quickly offered the job to Winston, and he accepted.

Starting in the fall semester of 1896, Winston began his service as the first president of the University of Texas. While the university was growing, it had its struggles. It faced fierce competition from church-sponsored colleges across the state, most notably Baylor University, and many legislators were still skeptical about financing a state university. As a result, Winston had very little money to work with. The university had two million acres of land at its disposal, including mineral rights from a grant dating to the Republic of Texas in the 1830s, but the land was in West Texas. Until it was discovered that a fortune in oil was under that land in the 1920s, the land did little for the university's finances.

In spite of these challenges, Winston began an active campaign across the state to improve the university's reputation and drum up support for it. New professors were hired, and the curriculum was modernized. The campus, however, was largely undeveloped and was mostly a series of pastures dotted with cattle. In spite of its location just a few blocks north of the Capitol, Winston struggled to gain more funding from the state legislature.

Slowly, the university's reputation began to improve. A new student newspaper was founded, the University Calendar. By 1899, enrollment neared 500 students. But UT still operated without electricity. Frustrated by his lack of progress, Winston decided to step down. In spite of his short three years at UT, he set in motion the growth, management, and sense of pride associated with the university. UT would never again be just an afterthought.

He accepted a position as president of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of North Carolina, later known as North Carolina State University. As with the UT and the University of North Carolina, Winston worked to improve its finances and to promote it across the state. However, his health was starting to decline.

In 1908, while only 55 years old, he decided to retire. He lived quietly on a pension and wrote a number of books. He died in 1932.

Today, UT is a of university with more than 50,000 students.
