Bears Beat Rough Riders!

The Brewer football team improved their district record to 2-1 on Friday night with a 42-23 victory over Saginaw.

The Bears will host The Colony at 7 p.m. on Oct. 6 in a game that could prove to be critical for Brewer's playoff chances.

"They're going to be physical," Wheeler said. "They like to run the football. They're going to get it outside and out of that quarterback's hands pretty quick, so we just have to buckle down and go play. I think the offense will be able to produce. It's just a matter of us doing our job on the defensive side of the ball."

Brewer's win over the Rough Rider's last week kept the team right in the thick of the playoff hunt, and Wheeler said that while he was pleased with the overall result, there were a few issues.

"We put up some points offensively and had 500 yards of offense," Wheeler said. "But we had a little let down in the second half defensively. We let them get back into the game and they had a chance to win it. We had a player, Lucas Cantu who made a big play for us, and came up with an interception in the end zone."

two touchdowns and rushing for 141 yards and a touchdown in the game.

Defensively, Cantu had a couple of pass breakups and the crucial interception for Brewer.

On the court, the Brewer volleyball team defeated Saginaw 3-0 on Friday night, and coach Jill Barkey said it was good to wrap up the first half of district play with a win.

“It wasn’t the cleanest game, but we fought to get it done in 3,” Barkey said. “It took a lot of mental toughness to come back from being down by 7 at one point in set 3 to win 28-26.”

Siara Terrazas and Ashlynn Gehring “led the team last night to victory,” Barkey said on Saturday.

The Lady Bears will be in their bye tomorrow night, and with the first round of district completed, Barkey said she is feeling good about the level at which her team is competing.

“We’re very excited about our playoff chances,” Barkey said. “We’re gonna continue to work hard every moment we get on the court in hopes that our hard work pays off.”

On the trails, Brewer competed in the Ken Gaston Invitational this past weekend, and coach Kathi Olson said the meet fulfilled her expectations going in.

“It’s such a great course and great competition (100 teams at the meet),” Olson said. “We had goals to run specific times on this course to give us momentum going into the next two weeks.”

Ki Rendon ran 18:56 and placed 5th overall for Brewer.

The Bears cross country team will host the Brewer Invitational tomorrow, the final competition before district, and Olson said it comes at a critical time.

“Next week is big for us,” Olson said. “It’s not only our home meet, but the same course for the biggest meet of the season, District. Our course is a challenging one, and I feel like it simulates Mae Simmons in Lubbock (Region course).”

Toiletries Drive

Keep White Settlement Beautiful will be collecting toiletries to make gift bags for the Seniors at the White Settlement Senior Center. This idea came about because our community has such a giving nature and we wanted to give people the opportunity to rally around the seniors.

Last year, the City donated over 457 cans of food for the Senior Food Drive and 89 coats for the Coat Drive. This year we decided to mix it up a little and provide them toiletries, which are in high demand.

Here is a list of common items needed: any wipes, adult diapers, body wash, shampoo, bar soap, toothbrushes, denture glue, deodorant and powder. Every donation will go directly to the Seniors.

If you would like to make donation or if you have any questions, contact Maureen at 817-246-5012, ext. 859.

Embark on a Cultural Journey at the Hispanic American Heritage Student Museum Project

Prepare to be inspired and amazed as we invite you to a captivating exploration of heritage, culture, and education at the grand opening of our Hispanic American Heritage Student Museum Project on Oct. 12 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. at Dolores Huerta Elementary School, a time-honored tradition that has enlightened minds since its inception in 1990.

The Hispanic American Heritage Student Museum Project, initiated over three decades ago, is a testament to the FWISD's commitment to fostering curiosity, knowledge, and cultural appreciation.

This event traces its origins to a noble aspiration: the promotion of literacy, authentic student learning experiences, and the cultivation of inspiration among elementary-grade students and their dedicated teachers. It encourages them to plan, research, and curate educational classroom projects and exhibits that shine a spotlight on historical and contemporary individuals from diverse cultural backgrounds.

The magic of this project lies not only in its educational value but also in its ability to foster community involvement. Parents are warmly invited to take part in the creation of classroom projects and exhibits, transforming this into a beloved community-wide tradition.

The museum will feature Latino artists like Celia Cruz and Selena, a celebration of family traditions and cultural contributions like pinatas, pan dulce, Loteria, math and science projects on the Mayan Number System, and more!

We are thrilled to announce that the doors of our school museum are open to the public, welcoming visitors to explore, learn, and celebrate the richness of Hispanic American heritage.

Scheduled tours are available for the public during school hours through Oct. 20.

Five Weight Loss Tips For Busy Parents

For parents, juggling the demands of work and home life can no doubt take a toll on physical health. In fact, a Cornell University study of 50 working moms and dads found that more than half turned to unhealthy eating options – such as pizza and fast food, because they were too busy to start a new healthy eating plan.

Here are five tips to fall back into a healthier routine and conquer your weight loss goals:

Eat enough protein. Protein is the key to feeling full and satisfied, especially when you're trying to lose a few pounds.

Get moving with fun, 15-minute workouts. As a busy parent, finding time to exercise may not be top of mind. Committing to just 15 minutes daily will do wonders for your health and help you stay on track with your weight loss goals. Look for new and exciting workouts to try, such as Pilates, dance and boxing, so that you don't get tired of doing the same exercises.

You can also get the family involved. Go on an evening walk together or take all the boredom out of exercise and have a dance competition!

Stock your fridge with healthy, seasonal options. Fall is the perfect time to enjoy in-season fruits and vegetables. During the cooler months, you'll find mouth-watering produce like apples, squash, salad greens, broccoli and Brussels sprouts that will satisfy your tastebuds. If you like trying new things, consider beets. Low in calories and high in fiber, vitamin C and potassium, beets make a great vegetable to add to your grocery list.

Plan your menu for the week. You're busy, so opt for easy, convenient options. That's where planning your weekly menu using healthy and simple ingredients comes in. Make sure to include variety so you don't risk getting bored. If you find yourself saying, "I had this last week. I don't feel like having that again," you may find yourself ordering takeout.

Another option is to look for a service that will deliver nutritionally-balanced, portion-controlled meals to your door.

Prioritize yourself. Being a busy parent can be exciting, but it could also mean having difficulty prioritizing yourself. Write yourself encouraging daily reminders and hang them around your home and workplace. Set aside time to read a book before bed. Do yoga for 15 minutes in your living room to unwind. Finding something new you love – be it meditation, crafting or listening to a podcast – can motivate you to stay committed to yourself.

Utilizing these simple tips will help you balance your busy work and home life and guide you on your successful weight loss journey. If you slip up, don't harp on your mistake instead, forgive yourself and start again.

Democratic Congressman, Hatton W. Sumners by Dr. Ken Bridges

Texas has produced many powerful political figures in its long history. In the 1930s, Texas had one of the most influential congressional delegations in the nation, including Sen. Morris Sheppard, the Senate Minority Whip, House Speaker John Nance Garner, and other congressmen such as future House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Wright Patman.

Among those figures was Congressman Hatton Sumners of Dallas, a 34-year veteran of Congress and chairman of the House Judiciary Committee for 14 years, helping to shape the direction of the federal judiciary.

Hatton Sumners was born in 1875 on a farm in Lincoln County, Tennessee, on the border with Alabama. His father had been a Confederate officer during the Civil War, and his parents also operated a boarding school. When he was 19, the family moved to Texas, settling in Garland, then a tiny community of just over 500 residents a few miles from Dallas.

Sumners wanted to pursue higher education and was interested in a law career. However, money was tight; and there were few alternatives at the time. He went to the Dallas city attorney, Alfred Wozencraft, and explained his plight.

Impressed by Sumners, Wozencraft hired him to work at his law firm, allowing him to study the law at night and even sleep in the offices. By 1897, Sumners passed the bar exam and began his work as an attorney.

In 1900, he decided to run for Dallas County Attorney. Though only having practiced for three years, Sumners won easily and became county attorney at the age of 25. He made shutting down gambling in the county a priority, a crusade that he claimed led to his defeat in the 1902 primary. He was re-elected in 1904 and convinced the state legislature to push through a bill making running a gambling establishment a felony. He declined to run for a third term in 1906 and was named president of the state district attorney's association and spent the next few years running his own law firm.

In 1912, he was elected to Congress. He jumped into his work, quickly passing a bill to make Dallas a port of entry, easing the importation of products from abroad. Sumners was an enthusiastic supporter of the Federal Reserve Act to reform the nation's banking system. He was instrumental in bringing the regional Federal Reserve Bank to Dallas. The move solidified the position of Dallas as a major financial center in the state.

His congressional colleagues acknowledged his expertise on constitutional law and had him assigned to the House Judiciary Committee in 1919. He worked on a number of reforms to the federal judiciary, including changes to case loads and retirements. Though he supported a fair and transparent judiciary, he was often hostile to civil rights legislation, as were many southerners at the time.

Sumners became chairman of the House Judiciary Committee in 1932. As part of his committee work, he served as a House manager in the impeachment cases of three federal judges in their trials before the Senate. He also appeared as an attorney before the Supreme Court on several occasions to defend the interests of Congress in several cases. In 1934, as President Franklin D. Roosevelt prepared to grant independence to the Philippines, Sumners wrote a constitution for the islands.

In 1946, he announced his retirement after 17 terms in Congress. He enjoyed a quiet life upon his return to Dallas. He lived on the campus of Southern Methodist University for several years while working as the Director of Research in Law and Government for the Southwestern Legal Foundation.

In 1949, he established the Hatton Sumners Foundation to offer scholarships to aspiring students and grants for researchers.

He published a book outlining his ideas about government and the importance of the civic responsibilities of individuals in The Private Citizen and His Democracy in 1959.

He died quietly in 1962.
